

RELIANCE WINS RACE WITH GREAT EASE.

Shamrock Did Not Get the Lead at Any Turn of the Course.

WALKAWAY AT END

At Last Stake Reliance Led by Four Minutes' Clear Water Very Easily

(Special by Scripps-McLag.) HIGHLANDS, AUGUST 25, 2 P. M.—RELIANCE WINS THE RACE BY GOOD MARGIN.

Highlands, Aug. 25.—The second race for the American cup is off today. The wind is of the right sort to best show the British boat's qualities. The race today is over the triangular course ten miles in each leg. At an early hour this morning a romping nine-knot breeze came in from the south and there is a fair tumble to the sea.

Lipton Confident Lipton voiced his opinion that the challenger would show the best form in a mild wind with a rolling sea. "I could desire nothing better," he said this morning, as he cast his eyes over the horizon. "and if the Shamrock loses today, I shall be very much disappointed." On the other hand Captain Barr declared that the Reliance would hold the Shamrock safe on all three legs.

Crews Active Both crews were active early this morning. Saturday's easy win did not to any extent diminish the interest in the race from the fleet of excursion boats which are crowding the bay.

Starting Guns With the wind blowing eight to nine knots the starting gun was fired and the yachts went over the line at the following times: Reliance, 11:02; Shamrock, 11:10. The Shamrock was thus handicapped at the start.

On Port Tack Highlands, 11:25 a. m.—Yachts are still on the port tack. Reliance has over minute and a half lead.

Gains Steadily Highlands, 11:30 a. m.—The Reliance is gaining steadily. Grey back southeaster is coming in and the excursion fleet will have difficulty in following the yachts on account of the mist.

Reliance Tacks Highlands 11:43.—Reliance tacks to the starboard.

Shamrock Tacks 11:45.—Shamrock tacks to the starboard across Reliance wake.

Pointed Higher Highlands, 11:50.—The Reliance is now pointed higher and is slowly increasing its lead.

Shamrock Coming Fast Highlands, 12 m.—On the starboard tack the Shamrock is doing the best work. She is even pointed higher than the Reliance.

Official Time Highlands.—The official starting time is given out—Reliance, 11:00:26; Shamrock, 11:02.

By Wireless Message 1:20.—A wireless dispatch puts Reliance nearly three-quarters of a mile ahead.

Rounds Mark Long Branch, 12:25.—The Reliance rounded the first mark 12:24:55; Shamrock, 12:25:51.

Second Mark Highlands.—A second wireless message says the Reliance crossed the second mark 1:25; Shamrock, 1:29:30.

Pewter Mug Is Safe

Highlands, 2 p. m.—The American cup will not be taken to Europe. In the second of the series of races for the trophy the American boat Reliance today conclusively proved her superiority over Lipton's Shamrock Third all the way over the triangular course. On the corrected time the Reliance won today's event by one minute and thirty seconds, unofficial. There was not enough sea to bother the flat bow of the Reliance and she seemed simply to slide over the waves.

The boats crossed the finish line as follows: Reliance, 2:15:25; Shamrock, 2:20:10, unofficial.

SHAMROCK III RETAINS HER TIME ALLOWANCE

Cable and Anchor Are Taken on Board and 1,100 Pounds of Ballast Is Removed.

New York, Aug. 25.—After having removed 1,100 pounds of ballast and taken on board a cable and anchor weighing that much, the Shamrock III was remeasured in a dry dock in Erie basin. The net result was that there was no change in the time allowance of 1 minute and 57 seconds, which the Reliance is compelled to give. The challenger was just three one-hundredths of a foot shorter than before the change and that difference was not sufficient to make a second's increase or decrease in the time allowance. Its load water line is now 89.78 feet and its racing length 104.375.

After the remeasurement the Shamrock III, in tow of the tug Cruiser and accompanied by the Erin, started for the anchorage in the horseshoe, where the challenger picked up her moorings.

In today's race the Shamrock III carries a new mainsail. The new sail was bent on to the spars after the challenger had reached her anchorage.

The Robinson family had been notified of his coming and had gone after him, each armed with revolvers, and it is claimed Tyrus slipped up and shot Davis four times in the back. Davis fell dead and his little sister, aged 10, ran from church, seized his pistol and made after Robinson, but was unable to fire the revolver.

WHITAKER WRIGHT HAVING HIS TRIAL

The Noted American Swindler Is Now Having a Hearing in London Court.

London, Aug. 25.—The proceedings in the case of Whitaker Wright, the company promoter, were resumed in the Guildhall police court today.

Horace B. Avory, senior counsel for the treasury, said that Wright, being managing director of the London and Globe, British American and Standard Exploration companies, used these names as suited his purpose for stock-exchange speculations and engaged wholly in fictitious transactions. As evidence that Rice controlled all the financial operations of the companies, he said the much discussed speech of the late Lord Dufferin at a shareholders' meeting was written by Wright. The day was occupied with the examination of witnesses in support of Mr. Avory's contention that Wright swindled the assets and diminished the liabilities of his companies by paper entries, transferring items of one company to another just before shareholders' meetings.

STOCK MARKET NOW IMPROVING

THE RECENT FLURRY HAS DONE MUCH GOOD.

IT HAS TAUGHT A LESSON

The Young Financiers Are Now More
Wary Than in Past
Times.

It is now quite evident that the late heavy decline in stocks was intensified by artificial means. A compilation has been made showing that this year's shrinkage in securities amounted to 2,650 millions on a capitalization of 6,034 millions, compared with a shrinkage of 1,368 millions, and a capitalization of 4,609 millions in 1893, a year of general financial disaster. Thus in a year of general prosperity we have had a contraction double that incurred in a year of adversity, only ten years ago. Every one must appreciate that such an enormous shrinkage in so limited a period is out of all proportion to any changes in conditions affecting values. Conceding that there was a high degree of inflation in 1902, that the money market had drifted into a critical condition because of excessive obligations, and that the stock market was carrying a threatening mass of indigestible securities, there were no changes in the crop, industrial, mercantile or financial situations that began to warrant any sound opinion agreed that, while the sound opinion agreed that, while the top of the boom might have been reached, no important decline in the volume of business was in sight; and outside of Wall Street, the signs of reaction were few and unimportant until the chilling influence of fear began to spread beyond financial precincts.

Powerful Control
During the whole downward movement there were signs of powerful control, generally exerted towards lower prices, but invariably used to check disaster at the critical moments. Opinions will, of course, vary as to the wisdom of such use of power, but no one will deny that the financial situation as a whole has been greatly strengthened and clarified by this forced liquidation, however unfortunate it may have proved for the individual. One excellent result is the sobering influence of such an experience, for nothing short of a financial cataclysm seemed able to stop the speculative fever that existed among a class of rich operators. This era of purely speculative syndicates and overcapitalized industries is fortunately over; it will shortly become a matter of history, and that it has not involved the country in wholesale financial disaster simply due to the severe, yet not wholly inconsiderate, contraction of credit imposed by our most powerful bankers.

A Good Lesson
It is quite certain, however, that this situation has been taken advantage of by some interests and the depression purposely prolonged, by those who seized the opportunity to force out certain holdings to settle old scores, or to check the high-flying proclivities of some of the younger great financiers, whose recklessness menaced the whole financial fabric. Fortunately, these dangers are now all behind us, and an clear understanding of this fact should encourage a restoration of confidence. We are at present going back from the abnormal to the normal; although that recovery cannot proceed without interruption, as many of the stocks taken over to assist those in trouble will probably come on the market at the higher level. Nevertheless, as already stated, the speculative situation has been greatly improved, and there is nothing to hinder a recovery of values to the normal which is considerably above the present level, even if that normal be adjusted to the most conservative view of the general situation.

Business Good
The country is practically certain of a large volume of business this season. Our farmers are likely to be prosperous for another year; because, while crops are not particularly heavy, prices are high and afford good profits. Labor is also well employed at good wages. Manufacturers are feeling the high cost of production somewhat, and there is likely to be less expenditure for extravagances than when the boom was at its height; yet the country as a whole is in a satisfactory condition. Our basic industry, the iron trade, is in better shape than supposed. It is true abnormal profits are disappearing, but there is a big demand for all sorts of iron and steel products at the most reasonable prices, and no signs of cessation are yet in sight.

Crop Demands
The worst as to the money market seems to have been anticipated. Crop demands are close at hand, yet bankers show no anxiety about meeting them. Should money rates advance much further gold imports would simply be hastened. Very soon produce bills will be in better supply and tend to weaken sterling bills. London shows more interest in American securities than for many months, and as soon as the distrust developed by our excessive promoting has disappeared we may expect a better demand from that quarter if prices do not advance too rapidly. A much more confident feeling prevails on the "Street" for stocks have passed from weak into stronger hands. Investment purchases have been liberal, and indications are that the larger local interests are working in the direction of higher prices.

Big Break
The stock market has had 40 per cent break during the past 10 months 25 per cent was doubtless justified as a reaction from an excessive six years' inflation. After the drop of 25 per cent then sand-bagging the market started in, which added 15 per cent to the previous legitimate recession in values. Now, then, the scare break of 15 per cent is what the market should finally recover from. Hence, the present advance will probably go on until the 15 per cent is regained, and that is about what the market, under the circumstances, may naturally be expected to do, but the up movement from now onward will be gradual and attended with frequent fluctuations, thus making a profitable market for quick-in-and-out trading.

Roadway.

The Janesville Contracting company are extending three wires from the plant at Monterey to Spring Brook. The distance from the power house at the lower cotton mills to Eastern avenue is in the neighborhood of a mile and a half so the work necessitated the placing of about forty poles, as the requirements of such a line are about thirty poles to the mile. These wires will be used for all purposes that the power is ordinary employed for, except street lighting. A transformer will be placed near the Porch Shade factory, as they installed a motor during the summer, so will need the power. It is probable that another transformer will be installed near the cannery factory; and possibly another later on for the Choate Hollister Furniture factory, to run a motor for that concern. Frank O. Samuels will equip his grocery store at the corner of McKee boulevard and Eastern avenue with electric lights and the Cronin residence on Eastern avenue will also be supplied.

The present work was begun last Thursday although the poles were in position sometime ago, and it is planned that the wires will be in place by tomorrow night. This is thought to be fast work for there were only four men to string the heavy wires and the poles, being mostly set in a sandy ground, are more difficult to manage and require more bracing than poles that are sunk in heavier earth.

GAIN DOUBLY ON ALL EUROPE NOW

UNITED STATES SHOWS GREAT GAIN IN POPULATION.

ARGENTENIA ALONE AHEAD

Figures Indicate That the South is Being Settled Fast with Good Emigrants.

The census bureau at Washington has published as a bulletin a discussion of the increase of population in the United States as shown by the census of 1900.

The increase in the population of continental United States, exclusive of Alaska and the recent insular accessions—was 13,046,861, or 60.7 per cent. Only one country, Argentina has shown by the most recent figures a more rapid rate of growth. The present rate of growth in continental United States is estimated as double that of Canada and exceeds by one-sixth that of Mexico and by one-tenth that of Australia. The rates of increase on the two sides of the northern Atlantic differ much less than they did a generation ago.

Among the five main divisions of continental United States the highest rate of increase is found in the western division and the lowest in the north central. Among the eleven minor divisions the highest rate of growth is found in the Rocky mountain group of states, closely followed by the western north central.

Good Growth in the South
In the decade 1890 to 1900 for the first time in our national history, the southern states increased faster than the northern. East of the Mississippi, however, the northern states as a group have grown in the last ten years somewhat more rapidly than the northern, and it is this fact which makes the growth of the south as a whole exceed that of the north. In the North Atlantic division the rate of increase has risen steadily since the civil war, a notable contrast to the trend in the country as a whole.

The region west of the Mississippi river is still increasing faster than east of it, but the differences between the rates of growth in the two regions from 1890 to 1900 was little more than one-fifth of what it was from 1850 to 1890. The region east of the Mississippi increased more rapidly from 1890 to 1900 than from 1850 to 1890, while that west of the Mississippi increased in the later decade not much more than half as fast as in the earlier. The conclusion is drawn that the increase growth of the east and the decreased growth of the west may both be connected with a probable decline in the current of westward migration.

Gains are More Uniform
The rate of increase in the north and the south during the last twenty years were practically the same. But in the character of this growth the two regions differ widely, their being a relatively uniform growth over the whole south, equalized by a balance in the north between a lower rate of rural growth and a higher rate of urban growth.

Extensive but sparsely settled areas in the western parts of Kansas, Nebraska and South Dakota show a decline of population in the last ten years, a fact which it is said may be connected with the increase of population in many agricultural counties of Iowa, Illinois and adjoining states from 1890 to 1900, after losing population during the preceding ten years.

Between 1890 and 1900 the per cent of increase in the population of all cities having at least 2,500 inhabitants was only two thirds of what it was between 1880 and 1890 (35.6 per cent, compared with 53.8 per cent.). The increase in the aggregate population living outside of such cities was approximately the same for the two decades (12.4 per cent. for 1890 to 1900 and 12.9 per cent. for 1880 to 1890). The most noteworthy result of the entire discussion, it is stated, is the cumulative evidence of the rapid approach to equality in the rates of increase of various parts of the United States. This appears whether north be compared with south, east with west or city with country.

FUNERAL SERMONS ARE IN DISFAVOR

Catholic Church is Taking Up the Question to Abolish Them.

A movement which is gradually being adopted in many parts of the country among the Catholic priests and which does away with the sermon usually preached in eulogy of the dead at all funerals, does not meet with favor here. In Janesville it is invariably left to the parties most directly concerned as to whether a funeral sermon shall be preached or no. In many cases it is done and there is little indication that the custom which has prevailed for so long will be done away with in the Catholic churches in this city.

No special motive has actuated this discontinuance of the burial sermon at the places where it has been started except that funeral sermons are deemed contrary to the spirit of the church; that they are an invocation unknown in earlier ages and in other countries. It is stated that in many American dioceses they are forbidden by statute of the ordinary and in the larger cities they are falling into disrepute.

Meaningless Conventionality
Funerals are so numerous, and sorrowing relatives expect equally favorable mention of their dead at the obsequies, that words of eulogy at funerals have become meaningless conventionality. The sacred nature of the service used at the burial of the deceased is sometimes lost sight of. Funerals are frequently attended by the curious, as well as the mourners and friends. The church offers the highest and greatest consolation at all times, to the bereaved; and those who fully appreciated the great sacrifice of the mass and the beautiful words of the ritual, could ask, reasonably, nothing further in drying their tears and alleviating their sorrow.

WONDERFUL CHILD WINS APPLAUSE

Nine-Year Old Actress Is Star of the Production of "The Fatal Wedding."

Although "The Fatal Wedding" gave equal pleasure throughout to the audience which assembled at the Myers Grand last evening, the greatest interest attached to the performance of Gladys Smith, the "little mother." Her part includes a total of about fifty-eight "sides" to use the language of the company, while the longest part taken by any adult member of the company includes only thirty-five or forty "sides." Yet in all of this part, which would be sufficiently difficult for a grown person to carry without a lapse of memory, little Miss Smith never once faltered.

This child actress is even younger than the part she takes, which is that of a ten-year-old girl. Miss Smith is said to have passed nine summers and winters on this earth, her last engagement theatrically having been fulfilled in "stock" at Toronto, Canada. Last evening was her first public performance of the part, and yet her mastery of her lines was more nearly complete than that of several of her elders. "The Fatal Wedding" possesses a vast amount of intrinsic merit in its way, and well deserves to be ranked among the best melodramas. In the hands of last night's company the audience emphatically demonstrated its complete satisfaction. The entire scenic equipment used was carried by the company, and appeared fresh and un worn. The general tone of the production was above that of the average road melodrama.

May Have Been Assaulted: A Beloit paper publishes a story which cannot be verified here to the effect that on the closing night of the fair an attempt was made to assault in an unspeakable manner a young boy whose name is said to be Newman and who is thought to be employed at the Marzluft factory. Inquiry at the factory throws no light on the matter.

The fire was discovered by Mr. Anderson, who saw the light through the barn floor, and was at the head of the stairs in the hay mow. He put blankets on the hay and by lively work smothered the flames. The fire evidently started among some old rags piled on a feed cutter and had burned long enough to char the cutter and a door quite badly. No one had been in the mow with a lantern that evening and the blaze may have been caused by spontaneous combustion, as some think, or as is more likely was the work of a fire bug. Had the barn burned the row of buildings to the east would have suffered the same fate. The fire engine would not work well, but fortunately it was not needed.

The Bible and The Empire State Express.

A bible student has recently been figuring on how long it would have taken the people to make the journey from Dan to Beersheba if they could have had the benefit in the olden times of the Empire State Express. He figured that the train would have made this journey in less than three hours, although from a reading of the account in the Bible one would think it was a long journey, and it was for those days with their limited means of transportation. Ezekiel, the Chaldean prophet, had in his mind's eye something like the Empire State Express when he uttered the words recorded in the first chapter of his prophecy. Look this up and see if you do not agree with the idea.—From the Troy Daily Times.

Execution of Contract.
Where one is dealing with an unlettered man, who can neither read or write, and makes his mark to the instrument he executes, and there is testimony tending to show that he did not understand the contents of such paper, or that his signature was obtained by fraud, it was incumbent upon the former to show by a preponderance of the evidence that the latter fully understood the object and import of the writing he executed. 96 Northwestern Rep. Judge Kirkpatrick, 56.

Railways.
A railway is not liable for injury to a passenger from a clinder from a locomotive coming through an open door of a car, the locomotive being in good repair and equipped with the best spark arrester, and being properly and skillfully managed and operated, and the proof not warranting a finding of culpable negligence in the carrier's having the door opened. 73 Pacific Rep. Oral License.
An oral license to the owner of a two-story building, permitting access to the second story by a stairway of an adjoining owner and through a party wall, which was given for a valuable consideration, and in reliance upon which the lessee has expended money or labor in altering his own premises to conform with this arrangement is not revocable. 73 Pacific Rep. Under a policy providing that, if the insured's death resulted solely from bodily injuries effected through violent and accidental means, a certain sum shall be paid; that, if such death result from such an accident while riding a bicycle, double that sum shall be paid; but that if death result from other causes, the insurer shall not be liable.—The insurer does not become liable on the death of the insured from epileptic peritonitis resulting from an inflammation of the appendix, caused by the regular movement of the psoas muscles while the insured was riding his bicycle. 83 New York Supplement (Judge McLenon) 238.

No Stomach Dosing—Just Breathe Hyomel—Stops Sneezing and Smarting.

King's Pharmacy are recommending to their customers, as a cure for hay fever, Hyomel.

It is claimed for this remedy that it stops the spasmodic paroxysms of sneezing, the smarting and running of the eyes and nose, and other acute symptoms of this disease.

Many persons have been cured of hay fever by Hyomel and its inventors profess to be able to prevent both the occurrence of the annual attacks and to arrest the progress of the disease when in the most chronic form.

Among those who have been cured by Hyomel are J. F. Forbes, chief dispatcher B. & M. R. R., McCook, Neb., who writes: "I have never had relief from any remedy for hay fever even temporarily, until I used Hyomel. I will always recommend it whenever occasion offers."

A. Hamlin, Westford, Mass., writes, "Hyomel cured me of hay fever in one week's time. I consider it a duty to tell others who suffer from this disease."

These endorsements are samples of hundreds that have been received by the manufacturers of Hyomel, but King's Pharmacy do not do all that is claimed for it, is the strongest proof that can be offered as to the reliance they place upon Hyomel to cure hay fever.

DO HONOR TO
CITY MARSHALCITIZENS PRESENT TOKENS TO
JOHN W. HOGAN.

FIRST ELECTED 23 YEARS AGO

Badge and Purse of Money Given to Head of Police Force for Faithful Labors.

In recognition of twenty-three years of faithful service as city marshal, the citizens of Janesville are this afternoon meeting at the assembly room of the municipal building to do honor to John W. Hogan. Their appreciation is taking substantial form in the presentation of a handsome badge of solid gold and a purse of money amounting to no inconsiderable sum. Verbal utterance of the sentiments which residents of the Bower City cherish toward the chief of their police force is being given by Mayor A. O. Wilson, ex-Mayor V. P. Richardson, and other prominent Janesvillians.

Present Emblem of Office.
Largely through the efforts of Dennis W. Hayes, although the project has met with an instant and unanimous favor that made urging superfluous, a considerable sum of money was raised among the citizens of Janesville for Marshal Hogan, who has only within the past two days been upon the streets, after spending a number of painful days under medical care. With a part of this money a gold badge was purchased. The emblem of the office is of the conventional star shape, and is engraved both upon the obverse and reverse faces. The inscriptions give the date of presentation to City Marshal John W. Hogan by the citizens of Janesville, and refer to his untiring efforts in the performance of the duties of his office.

Long Term of Service.
On August 9, 1880 John W. Hogan was elected city marshal to succeed Edward Smith. He held the office continuously for ten years, when on Dec. 22, 1890 he resigned to act as sheriff of Rock county, and was succeeded by T. L. Acheson. Mr. Hogan again became city marshal in 1897, retaining the office until the present time.

During this long term Mr. Hogan has gained an enviable reputation for the good order which has been maintained in the city. His judicious mixture of severity and tolerance has enabled him to bring about observance of the law in a high degree.

To Present the Token.
As a suitable time to present the badge and purse to Marshal Hogan this afternoon was selected, a mass meeting of the citizens being called for the assembly room of the city hall at four o'clock. To make the speech of presentation Mayor A. O. Wilson and ex-Mayor V. P. Richardson have been chosen. Mayor Wilson will tender the badge of office and Mr. Richardson the money. Others will probably be called upon, the remaining speeches being of an informal nature and not prearranged.

CLOUGH INSISTS ON FIFTY YEARSTELLS MILTON PEOPLE MUST HAVE EXTENSION.

PLANS TO USE MILTON ROUTE

Talks Encouragingly to Delegation of Citizens, But Says It Depends on Janesville Council.

Members of the party of Milton and Milton Junction citizens who besieged H. H. Clough in his Beloit offices yesterday declare that it is up to the Janesville common council whether or not the Clough interests will build an extension to Madison. They say that he made the statement, that unless the council agreed to extend the franchise period from thirty-five to fifty years he would not consider building the proposed extension.

Talked Favorably.
In general the members of the party from the two cities were highly elated over the outcome of the trip. Mr. Clough said that he had never seriously considered any route to Madison save that which lay through the two cities. In making the surveys other routes were mapped and the probable results of the various proposed lines calculated, but business seemed to demand that the road embrace both Milton and Milton Junction.

Up to Council.
Difficulty has been experienced in attempting to finance the road for a period so short as thirty-five years. Among the aldermen the sentiment appears to be largely in favor of making that concession, although they do not view with favor the other stipulations of the proposed amended ordinance which relieves the Interurban company of a number of conditions which were valuable to the city. The matter will probably come up next Monday evening before the common council. At some time before that date the judiciary committee will hold a consultation with the representatives of the electric road.

Milton Men Speak.
The Madison end of the extension is desired by the Milton and Milton Junction people very strongly, as they can now make no satisfactory connections with the Capital City. The Janesville travel, however, is no inconsiderable item, as an average of four hundred tickets a month are sold from the Milton station to this city. Among the speakers of the party from the two cities were S. C. Carr, a farmer living near Milton Junction, J. C. Carr of Milton, Clem W. Crumb, the chairman of the Milton delegation, W. B. West, a lumber man at the Junction, George R. Boss of Dunn, Boss & Co., at Milton. The party numbered about forty-two, and included three or four men from Edgerton. County Treasurer Rice was one of the Milton party.

Coming Attractions.

The music of Strange and Edwards' new patriotic comic opera "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" that will be presented at the Myers Grand Friday night by the Whitney Opera Company, has already become vastly popular even in cities where the opera has not been heard. Among the songs that have established themselves as prime; popular favorites are, "My Own much to do with its success. The great charm of "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" and the hold that it undoubtedly has taken on the popular mind, is probably the results of the original treatment in the score of familiar themes.

There is genuine comedy all through "Quincy Adams Sawyer" and the few touches of pathos in the play strike as true and convincing.

Another song that is considered by many as the gem of the opera is "Katie my Southern Rose," sung by Johnny first with the male chorus and later by the combined chorus of boys and girls. The business in this song with the girls nodding and backing in the quaint costumes of the forty years ago, undoubtedly has

The story is a simple and a sweet one appealing to the heart. There is nothing in it approaching a villain or an adventure for it is not a melodrama, it is only a wholesome, clearly cut picture of New England life, and as such it finds favor everywhere, in town or city. The play "leaves a good taste in the mouth" and that is, after all, what the people want. The play will be seen at the Myers Grand on Sept. 24th.

LAND SCANDALS SPREADING OUT

GETS STOCK FOR INFLUENCE

Allegation Is Made That Official Is Made Director of Land Company and That He Coerced Indians to Give Him Power of Attorney.

Washington, Aug. 25.—The scandals in the Indian land deals which involve officials of several branches of the government outside of the interior department continue to grow at an alarming rate. Charges of malfeasance in office in connection with the Indian land transactions, as well as other serious charges, have been filed with the department of justice by F. Flais Fox, an editor at Ardmore, I. T., against United States Marshal Benjamin H. Colbert of the southern district of that territory.

These charges include connection with a land company alleged to have been engaged in these land deals, the alleged use of his official position to further the political ambitions of friends, releasing prisoners temporarily in order to allow them to vote, threatening to imprison Indians if they did not vote as directed by the marshal, and neglect of duty. Fox, in his charge against Colbert, says:

Gist of the Charge. "Soon after his appointment he took an active interest in the gubernatorial election in the Chickasaw nation, and used his office to intimidate, by force of arms, the opponents of his candidate for governor, and by false representations induced the government of the United States to use its civil powers in the furtherance of his political schemes, which caused not only the expenditure of a large amount of money, but which necessitated the taking away of a large number of deputy marshals from their posts of duty."

Marshal Colbert is charged with reappointing Ben Collins as deputy marshal after the latter had been removed from that position for misconduct in office. Collins was charged with having expressed pleasure at the news of the shooting of President McKinley, and to have expressed the hope that he would die so that Colbert could secure an appointment.

Takes Prisoners to Polls. Fox, in his statement, charges that "during said gubernatorial election Colbert took prisoners out of the federal jail and carried them to Oakland, a distance of thirty miles, in order to have them vote for his candidate for governor. He also threatened to have an Indian put in jail if he did not vote as he told him to."

Fox charges that Colbert is director of an Indian land company with headquarters at Tishomingo, capital of the Chickasaw nation, and that stock in the company was presented because of Colbert's standing as an official of the government. He also is charged with having secured powers of attorney from Indian chiefs so as to vote their stock. This company is the Tribal Development company and Fox charges that it has engaged in land deals which will not bear close scrutiny. Fox also charges that this company has a "pull" with some of the land office officials, as it has no difficulty in having lands allotted, while other corporations have.

Alleges Malfeasance. The marshal is then charged with continuously absconding himself from the sessions of the court in order to attend to private business in Texas, Arkansas, and other states, with the result that witnesses and jurors frequently have been unable to get their checks from the government until after several days' delay, causing great inconvenience to farmers and others who have driven long distances to attend court. Also as private citizen he is alleged to have been allowed to use the telegraph at the government rate of toll.

Some time ago S. M. Brosius, agent of the Indian Rights association, charged Gov. Moseley of the Chickasaws with being a stockholder in the Tribal Development company. Brosius states that Guy P. Cobb, who was internal revenue collector for this district, is the principal stockholder. A short time ago Cobb resigned. These charges will be investigated, and there will be a general shake up, including the appointment of a new Dawes commission, the members of which are charged with being involved in frauds.

DECLARES HIMSELF A BAD MAN

Defendant Asserts That on Night When Attack Was Made He Stabbed His Horse Opposite the Prison, but Did Not Join Mob.

Danville, Ill., Aug. 25.—"We've got to get into this jail if we have to kill the officers. I've been in jail and I'm a bad man."

"Yes, partner, you look like it." Such, according to Sheriff Hard II. Whitlock, was the conversation between Winfield Baker and himself on the night of July 25, when an attack was made on the county jail by a mob eager to lynch Henry Wilson, a negro, charged with attacking a woman.

Baker, charged with assault with intent to kill Sheriff Whitlock during the attack, was placed on trial before Judge M. W. Thompson in the Circuit court.

The witnesses for the state were Sheriff Whitlock, Deputies Charles Runyan, David Newlin and Enoch Vanvickie, and Dr. S. N. Sims.

Threatens Sheriff.

Sheriff Whitlock testified that he had never seen Baker before the attack on the jail. When the attack first began he was outside, and went to the south door, where several men were attempting to batter it in with a cross-tie. He persuaded them to desist, and all but Baker left the door. Baker had two revolvers, and said: "We've got to get into this jail if we have to kill the officers. I've been in jail, and I'm a bad man."

"Yes, partner, you look like it," responded the sheriff.

Later the witness saw Baker standing in the mob in front of the jail, where a steel rail was being used as a battering ram. He saw Baker fire a revolver at the witness.

"He stood in the crowd, and I was afraid to shoot in return for fear of hitting others," declared the witness. "If he had been out of that crowd I'd have blown his head off, and he wouldn't be here to testify to-day."

Defendant Testifies.

Deputy Runyan testified that he saw Baker shoot at Whitlock twice and then circulate among the mob, urging them to attack the jail.

The defendant testified that he came to the city on the night of the lynching at 8:30 o'clock, and went home at 10:30 o'clock. He put his horse and buggy in a livery stable across the street from the jail, and that the only time he was near the jail was when he went after his rig. With Thomas Blakeley he went within half a square of the jail several times, but went away without taking part in the attack.

Assistant State's Attorney Acton made the opening argument for the state.

THE OTHER MAN

By FREDERIC REDDALE

Copyright, 1902, by J. P. Lippincott Company.

CHAPTER II.

When two men fall out who are closely allied by blood or by friendship the breach is apt to be all the more deadly and bitter than if they had been only mere acquaintances.

And when the same men quarrel over a woman, covertly or openly, beware of the consequences, for a very pretty feud is apt to ensue.

It was Richard Dysart's misfortune to be born the younger son in a family long in lineage but short in wealth. He was bred to the law, having hopes of family influence and preferment in that quarter, his own taste being for the army. But old Sir Arthur Dysart, his father, had his own way, and Rick, religiously kept his terms and ate his dinners at the Temple.

The elder brother, also named Arthur—there had always been a Sir Arthur Dysart since Charles Second's time—was of a studious turn, being slight and dark in stature and complexion, presenting a complete antithesis to his Berserk younger brother. In tastes and likings they were also at opposites. Arthur seldom shot over his father's preserves; Rick was never so happy as when he had a gun over his shoulder and a good dog at heel. Arthur loved books and flowers and music, and was something of a colorist; Rick almost hated the sight of a book, and esteemed a ride to the hounds worth more than a library of Elzevirs, and the merry toot of the huntsman's horn prettier than a classic symphony.

But it must not be inferred that Arthur was by any means a milk-sop—he was a type of the modern English gentleman, than whom there is none finer on God's footstool; and if his pursuits were of the more peaceful order, he could, nevertheless, be trusted to hold his own anywhere and with anybody.

Now, the Dysart acres were strictly entailed, and as a younger son Richard Dysart could not expect more than a modest inheritance. Old Sir Arthur had foreseen this, and managed to lay by a few hundreds which at his death he intended to bequeath to Rick to tide him over the briefless days that come to every budding barrister. Stella Dysart, the sister, was amply provided for, her mother's jointure having been settled upon her absolutely.

But the will, put off from day to day, was never made, and one morning the old baronet came a cropper over his horse, was carried home with a broken neck, and a new Sir Arthur, tenth of his line, reigned at Denecroft.

The latter was perfectly cognizant of his father's intentions respecting his brother, and meant to scrupulously carry them out, when an unexpected obstacle occurred, to wit, a bitter and acrimonious quarrel betwixt the brothers.

Marcia Churchill was the woman in the case, daughter of old Squire Churchill, the reigning beauty of at least three counties, at this time in the heyday of her social triumphs.

Perhaps because Marcia Churchill and Stella Dysart were representatives of two distinct types of beauty they were pretty close friends. Marcia might have stood for one of DuMaurier's women, for she was tall and stately, patrician, and severely beautiful. Stella Dysart scarcely came up to her shoulder, being as petite and as pretty as a Dresden shepherdess.

The four young people had known one another from childhood, when they romped together in the woods of Denecroft or roamed over the daisy meadows of Gatewood, the Churchill property. As boys the two Dysarts vied with each other as to who should be Marcia's champion, and with characteristic feminine impartiality she showered her favors upon each in turn. Now it was Arthur's week, and again Richard would be her knight.

The rivalry continued, more quietly but fully as intense, after the brothers came back from Cambridge, but both of them feared to put the question of precedence to the test. Marcia went through two seasons scathless and apparently heart-free, so perhaps her mind was made up after all.

If Arthur Dysart had the advantage of the heirship on his side and of nearness to the Churchill estates while Richard was grinding away at his lawbooks in London, the latter had his own little compensations, for he saw the girl constantly during the season, and lost no occasion of quietly keeping himself to the fore. Richard divined somehow that Arthur would not propose while his father lived, and so was content to wait, hoping the while that his own ship would come into port.

Matters were at this stage of truce and tension when there came the news of Sir Arthur's death.

Richard went down for the funeral, and then it was discovered that there was no will. Immediately his position flashed upon him; he was absolutely dependent upon his brother's bounty, for naturally his allowance stopped with the demise of his father. It also dawned upon him that now Marcia would be called upon to make a decision, and that she would perhaps prefer a baronet de facto and de jure to a penniless young barrister with no law and few facts in his favor.

It is not surprising, then, that he felt very much like a modern Esau, and in no pleasant mood, when, on the third day after the funeral, as the brothers were at breakfast, the new

Sir Arthur said, in his hesitating habit of speech:

"Er—er—Rick, if you're not going out this morning I should like a word with you."

Sir Arthur had what is called a bad manner; he was self-conscious and bashful to a degree; upon ordinary occasions he was apt to hesitate and falter and flounder, although at other times and upon other topics where he was sure of his ground he could be terse and even epigrammatic.

Rick looked up from his letters, and, being in the "dumps," as he would have expressed it, merely grunted an assent.

Nothing more was said until the meal was ended. Then, leaning back in his leather chair and lighting a cigar—Sir Arthur abhorred tobacco—he said sulkily, sarcastically giving his brother his title—

"Well, 'Sir Arthur,' what is it?"

It was not a very inviting opening. Yet it may be conceded that fate had certainly not been kind to Richard. At bottom he loved his brother, and in his heart he knew that Sir Arthur wanted to do the right thing. But a perverse humor held him that morning, and he would make no effort at complaisance or conciliation.

Sir Arthur flushed painfully at Rick's carelessly contemptuous tone. He rose and went to the window, where he stood in silence while the second-hand of the old clock ticked solemnly half-way round its dial.

"I—I—want to put things right, old man," he said at length, facing inward, towards Rick, who sat moodily smoking, his cigar tilted towards the ceiling.

"Do you? That's kind!" was the curt rejoinder.

The baronet looked at his brother in mute surprise; the hot color flamed in his sallow face and as suddenly left it paler than its wont. He had never before seen Rick like this. But he controlled himself and went on, a little more fluently, as though the other had not spoken.

"Yes, I happen to know what father's intentions were about money matters, and I am prepared to carry them out to the letter."

"Did he tell you to do it?" inquired Rick laconically.

"You remember he never spoke after they carried him home," said Sir Arthur reproachfully, "but I knew from what he said to me at times that you were to be taken care of—that you would have been provided for if there had been a will—and I simply mean to act in his stead."

All this was certainly very fair and generous, and the baronet looked expectantly at Richard for some sign of a relenting humor. But the perverse devil which clutched his heart-strings would permit no relaxation, and the only response was a monosyllabic and irritating—

"Well?"

Sir Arthur's patience was giving way, and signs of the Dysart temper appeared in the shape of certain twitchings and indentations of the nostrils, yet he kept himself in hand wonderfully.

"There is not much ready cash, Rick—you know there never has been," he went on, "but father set aside certain sums which you were to have at his death. I believe the amount is now something like a couple of thousand pounds, and this shall be paid in to your account as soon as the lawyers can arrange it."

"Thanks awfully," drawled Richard. He knew in his heart that Sir Arthur was acting nobly and generously, even as he would have acted had their positions been reversed. Yet back of it all was the knowledge, common to each, that a woman had come between them, that they both loved her, and that only one of them could possess her. This hardened both of them.

But Richard had begun the interview badly, and the Dysart pride, which was fully as bad as the Dysart temper, would not let him descend from his lofty perch. And although he knew he was wronging his brother grievously by the suspicion, the fiend within compelled him to continue—

"And so you wash your hands of me, and I can go to the devil with your two thousand pounds!"

Sir Arthur's patience was exhausted, and even his affection could not withstand this last thrust, coupled with what had gone before. Still, as Rick waxed hot, he grew cool.

"It is a matter of complete indifference to me what you do or where you go," he retorted jolly. "I have done my duty. More you could not ask; more you shall not have. I wish you good-morning and a better temper!"

With these words he turned away, and was for stepping out on the lawn. But in a couple of strides Richard was by his side, a strong hand on his shoulder, so as to swing him round, and they stood face to face, one as hot as molten iron, the other as cool as chilled steel.

"All very fine!" Rick sneered. "Now that you've got the title, I suppose you think you'll capture the lady bestides. But don't be too sure!"

The cadish thrust told. The baronet quivered, and then steadied himself as does a good fencer when his enemy's foil touches a vital spot. His eyes blazed, yet still he kept admirable outward control of his temper. With cool and cutting irony he rejoined:

"If the lady gets you, I shall be the first to congratulate her on her exceedingly wise choice. She might do better. I do not see how she could do worse!"

Then he passed out to the grass, paused, and again turned to where Richard stood, speechless with rage and chagrin, saying as though to a mere caller:

"I will order the gig round in an hour. There is a train at 12:40. I would not hurry you, or hint that I am the master here, but doubtless you will be glad to leave Denecroft."

And with a slight bow he passed round a turret angle, and Richard saw him no more. Thus the brothers parted.

Half mad and blind with rage, mortification, and self-condemnation Richard went to his room, tossed his traps

"MARCIA," HE WENT ON, "BEFORE I GO YOU MUST CHOOSE ONCE FOR ALL BETWEEN THE RICH BARONET AND THE POOR BARRISTER."

Into his bag, left directions for the gig to bring it after him, and then started to walk to the station.

Long before he reached London his better self regained the ascendancy, and bitterly he rued the wrong he had done his brother and the mess he had made of things. Pride forbade him to go back and apologize as he ought. Not a penny of that cursed money would he touch. He would leave England and carve out an independent fortune for himself.

But at first he must see Marcia and find out if she too were among the things he had that day lost.

Fortunately he found her "at home" and alone. It was the first time they had met since his father's death, and as she rose and came forward with outstretched hands to welcome him she said—

"I knew you would come to me first upon your return."

Her words and her manner fell like balm on his storm-tossed and angry spirit, and something like a sob had to be gulped down before he could speak, and even then his eyes were suspiciously moist.

"Yes," he said, leading her to a seat, "and even now I am come to say good-by. I am leaving England," he continued in answer to the mute and appealing inquiry in her eyes.

"Leaving England!" she replied in deep contralto tones; "and why?"

"To make my fortune," he answered as jauntily as he could.

"But surely—" she began, when he took the words out of her mouth.

"Oh, yes, Sir Arthur has done the handsomest thing so far as money is concerned, but we've had a beastly row, and I can't touch a penny. So I'm going away."

"A quarrel with Sir Arthur—going away!" she repeated dully, with dilated eyes.

He nodded. "But it was all my fault; I acted like a calf. I was mad with doubt and uncertainty. Arthur behaved like a Dysart—practically ordered me off the premises, just as I'd have done if he had checked me. I've only myself to thank," he concluded, gloomily.

Richard was very, very young, or he would have known that one of the surest ways to a woman's heart is self-depreciation, especially when that woman is in love with a man. Because then she has the satisfaction of proving, among other things, that her idol is not made of clay.

For Rick it was a relief thus to make confession, to look into her troubled eyes, their depths stirred for him, as he felt, and to divine that she at least would not be indifferent to his going.

Marcia laid her cool palm on his hot hand, and unthinkingly left it there. In a moment he had covered it with the other, and held it imprisoned.

"I own I was in the wrong," he reiterated. "But I was wild at the thought that perhaps I had lost everything. Marcia," he went on, "before I go you must choose once for all between the rich baronet and the poor barrister. You know what I mean, dear!"

The warm color rose to her cheeks; her bosom palpitated; her breath came and went in fitful unison with its throbbings. He held her hands insistently, nor did she strive to withdraw them. Raising her eyes to his she said, with a half smile dimpled her mouth:

"You foolish boy! the choice was made years and years ago, and—it isn't the baronet!" she faltered, as her head sunk on his shoulder.

"My darling!" he exclaimed, as he strained her yielding form to him, "do you mean it?"

"Yes," she sighed blissfully; "it seems as if I had always loved you, Rick!"

"And will you wait for me, Marcia?" he queried.

"For ever and always!" she rejoined, gladly and proudly, smiling at him

TURKS EXHIBIT HEADS ON POLES

Sofia, Aug. 25.—Travelers who arrived here from Adrianople state that a massacre of Christians occurred there Aug. 23.

One version says the guns in one of the forts opened fire on an insurgent band which had attacked a military outpost. A panic followed inside the town, and the Mohammedan population fell upon the Christians.

According to another version, a Turkish officer tried to force an entrance into a Bulgarian house in order to molest the inmates. The latter resisted, whereupon the Mohammedans became excited and bands of soldiers and bashi-bazouks attacked the Bulgarian quarter of the town.

Consuls Enter Protest.
It is reported that the foreign consuls addressed energetic protests to the wali, who declared his inability to check the fanaticism of the muslims.

Adrianople is the second city in European Turkey in size and importance. It has a population of 150,000.

The Turks have ended the Macedonian revolt in the vilayet of Monastir by burning nearly every village and murdering nearly every man, woman and child.

The general situation is considered here as fast becoming insupportable. Official and diplomatic circles alike are concerned, having every reason to fear that only a part of the horrors enacted in the interior of Macedonia have come to light as yet.

Outlook Is Serious.
The revolutionary committees are doing their utmost to force the hands of the Bulgarian government, and the immediate outlook is exceedingly serious.

The scene of insurgent operations is rapidly shifting to the eastern part of Macedonia and nearer to the Bulgarian frontier. Dispatches arriving from the disturbed areas are exceedingly gloomy. From Adrianople comes news of a Turkish defeat and the extension of the revolutionary outbreak; from Monastir, the news of Turkish victories, accompanied by barbarous excess.

The reports from Monastir are authenticated by the Russian and Austrian consuls. They give horrifying details of the massacres and atrocities. At the village of Armenako the Turks destroyed 150 houses out of a total of 157, and massacred every man, woman and child. The women were subjected to the most terrible indignities by the soldiers.

Mutilate the Bodies.
The Turks committed unspeakable atrocities at Krushevo.

The mutilated corpses of ninety women and children were found in one building; pieces of the bodies had been thrown into the street. Fifteen of the principal merchants of the town were killed and their heads exhibited on poles. In Monastir the churches were demolished, the houses sacked and the town is now in a heap of ashes. The populace fled to the hills, where they are in a starving condition. The streets of Krushevo are said to be strewn with dead, and the survivors are afraid to bury the bodies fearing to incur the suspicion of the Turks.

Guards Commit Murder.
Eighty insurgent prisoners captured at Krushevo and sent to Monastir were slaughtered by their guards.

Anarchy exists at Lonesgrad. Fighting is proceeding everywhere in the neighborhood. Insurgent bands have occupied the strategic points around Malkoterno. Eight villages to the north of Lonesgrad have been burned by bashi-bazouks, while the insurgents attacked two Turkish posts in the vicinity of the same town and killed their entire garrisons, consisting of sixty soldiers and one officer.

At Almogic sixty insurgents engaged in fighting with 300 bashi-bazouks. The result is not known.

Blood Flows Freely.
The town of Bunar Hisar has been burned and a part of the Bulgarian population was massacred. The rest of the Bulgarians fled to the mountains.

At Burgas Majura, after eighteen hours' fighting, the garrison was killed by rebels, who also destroyed the garrisons of Silkhior and Kalova.

At Karacunvo the insurgents killed fifty-seven Turks, while fifteen Turks were killed at Kurkolbi in the vilayet of Uskub. New outbreaks are reported from the vicinity of Kresna, where serious fighting has occurred.

The Turks are reported to have massacred all the women and children in twenty-two villages of the districts of Florina and Monastir and to have afterwards burned the villages.

PAYING TELLER IS ACCUSED

Surety Company Is Asked to Make Good Loss of Des Moines Bank.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 25.—Elton C. Kelley, teller of the Iowa National bank, is accused of disposing of $5,000 through personal dishonesty or culpable neglect while acting as paying teller for the Des Moines National bank.

No criminal action has been commenced, but the charge is made in a petition filed in the district court asking judgment against the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company of Baltimore, which went to Kelley's surety, to recover the amount. The shortage, it is said, was discovered Aug. 25, 1902, when Kelley was in the employ of the Des Moines National. He was discharged without the affair being made public and is now holding a good position in another bank.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 25.—United States Senator T. O. Bacon and a party of prominent Atlanta people went without breakfast at Hamlet, N. C., while Booker T. Washington and a number of negroes were feasted in the dining room in the depot. The main dining room was given over entirely to the negro delegation, while a small table in the side reading room was cleared of books and a few plates were laid for the white men, who were then invited to partake of their morning meal. Senator Bacon and the members of the Atlanta party refused to satisfy their hunger under the circumstances.

FEAR MANY DIED IN AWFUL FIRE

Crowded Tenement Houses in Budapest Are Destroyed by Blaze.

Buda-Pesth, Aug. 25.—One hundred and twenty persons were burned to death in the destruction here Aug. 24 of a large four-story building occupied as a fancy goods manufacturing, employing 200 men and women.

In addition thirteen persons were killed outright and sixteen injured, nine fatally, in jumping from the windows.

The 200 men, women and girls employed by the fancy goods firm were in the building and the escape of many of them and of the residents on the third and fourth floors was cut off by the flames.

The warehouse contained piles of flimsy material and the flames spread with frightful rapidity and soon reached the residential floors.

Only the work people near the doors below were able to effect their escape. The residents above, seeing their escape cut off, clung desperately to the windows, screaming for help. The firemen held out sheets of canvass and called to them to jump. It was here that by jumping fifteen persons were killed.

ISSUES INCORPORATION LIST

Secretary of State Finds Big Increase During the Year.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 25.—Secretary of State Rose is mailing certified lists of active corporations in the state. The compilation shows about 11,000 corporations existing in Illinois, an increase of 2,000 in the last year. The number of corporations formed in the last year has reached nearly 4,000, but 1,600 that were living a year ago have since dissolved. Some delay has been experienced in the work, as it was desired to incorporate in it the decision of the supreme court on the constitutionality of the act providing for annual reports by corporations to the secretary of state. As that question will not be passed upon until the October term of court, however, it was decided to issue the volume without waiting for a legal decision of the question.
